THIRTY YEARS OF GROWTH

A Responsible Society

"A Responsible Society is one where freedom is the freedom of men who acknowledge responsibility to justice and public order, and where those who hold political authority or economic power are responsible for its exercise to God and the people whose welfare is affected by it."¹

This may serve a useful purpose in pointing out to Fellows of the College as well as to members of whatever group of dentists there may be within the ranks of the dental profession, something of the rationality of our being. It will bear analysis and perhaps paraphrasing to some extent in order to make suitable application.

First to be considered is the expression, "A Responsible Society." This will need no further thought, other than to say, not many Fellows would be interested if as a group or Society we had no responsibility or served no useful purpose, either as a group or as individuals. We seek and we accept responsibility.

Second, freedom comes only to those who acknowledge and who practice responsibility, and particularly with reference to "justice and public order." Whether or not one may accept the admonition, "I am my brother's keeper," surely, we are possessed of sufficient rationality to know that each prospers as does the other. Hence, there must obtain some element of justice among us. Similarly, with regard to "public order"—just where would we land without regard for decorum?

Third, there are those among us, who by virtue of the acts of the rest of us are granted the special privilege of office-holding or of leadership. Within certain limits, authority goes with the office and considered in its broad social or philosophical aspect, this is political. The successful man in politics or in any public or semi-public office of whatever size or type of 'group', is he who conducts himself philosophically rather than purely strategically. The term "philosophy" admits need of some strategy, diplomacy and power of persuasion. As for 'economic' power, a minimum must go with the office, and with assignment to those who give sole thought to money matters. Within our group, this is simple, merely a matter of balancing receipts and disbursements. But that is necessary.

And, fourth, all of us have a responsibility to something beyond us and to the people whom we serve. Just as in our everyday life, we are constantly responsible to the Center of Gravity and the Law of Gravity, we are also responsible to another force unseen but omnipresent and omniscient. This is a spiritual force, and finally, we are responsible to the rest of our group or to the people who grant the privilege of thus serving.

The American College of Dentists has labored during the past thirty years, at first to bring themselves to a point of sufficient numbers to provide counsel and workers. This accomplished, the next thought was the matter of professional growth and development. A hurried glance back over the years will allow the reader to see the changes which have taken place—some due to natural growth; some due to the on-coming generation who must according to John Stuart Mill, excel the preceding; some, due to the combined efforts of all groups within the profession, all the way from the American Dental Association through all of us, fraternities and all the rest; but some have had special attention by the College, e.g., Dental Health, Prosthetic Service, Hospital Dental Service, Journalism, Research, etc., in studies of which much money has been spent and much effort expended. All of this redounds to the credit of the College and thus her part has been played.

There is yet, one other part played by the College—a cursory or initial study of dental schools all over the world. The report of this study or survey was submitted in the Journal and latterly or concluded in the Journal of Dental Education. This has served a useful purpose and no doubt will be the beginning of a closer relationship and of greater helpfulness, one to another. Dental Educators and dentists need to know each other better.

In this issue of the Journal appear two items which have within the past week come to hand—one from Japan and one from New Zealand. In the former can be noted a positive step ahead and now with a little boost from us, one can easily foresee the outcome. As for the other, the American Dental Association has sent a representative to that country to study dental conditions. What will both of those contacts mean for us and finally for them? This is our responsibility.

Let us now think in terms of the next thirty years.

HAROLD S. SMITH: A TRIBUTE¹

OTTO W. BRONDHORST, D.D.S., *St. Louis*²

I deem it an honor and a privilege to address you on behalf of a Fellow who has served this College as Treasurer for nearly a quarter century. It is an honor because there are many others who could perform this service better than I.

It is a privilege because it offers an opportunity to express appreciation to one with whom I have served on the Board of Regents for many years, and whose counsel I valued very highly and whose integrity I never questioned.

Harold Smith became a Fellow of the American College of Dentists on November 12, 1924, four years after its founding, and was elected Treasurer on September 22, 1925.

During the next quarter century, he wielded an influence not only on the development of the College, but upon the dental profession and its public relationship, that only the historian will be able to fully evaluate.

With a "never give up" attitude and a desire to push the frontiers of dentistry forward, he battled dangerous influences with no regard to self, but with only the advancement of the dental profession and better public understanding as his objective.

Perhaps Doane, the poet, expressed it when he said:

"Chisel in hand stood a sculptor boy
With his marble block before him,
And his eyes lit up with a smile of joy
As an angel-dreaming passed o'er him."

² Secretary of the College.

1882-1949

He carved the dream on that shapeless stone,
With many a sharp incision;
With heaven's own light the sculpture shone
He'd caught the angel-vision."

The vision he had caught early in his career and which he carved during the subsequent years, will long light the way for young men entering the profession as it brought satisfaction to others as they joined in the battles for professional ideals as the soul of dentistry marched on and on.

It seems fitting then that Harold Smith's life should be entwined with fraternity activities on the one hand,—where example and leadership means so much; and the American College of Dentists whose objectives are the foundation stones upon which a sound professional structure can be built.

Weighed by any standard, he becomes a character of great importance and an influence for all the better things that the American College of Dentists stands for and strives to attain.

On this occasion the Board of Regents, on behalf of the College, presents to Dr. Smith this plaque which reads:

"THE BOARD OF REGENTS
And the Fellows of the
AMERICAN COLLEGE OF DENTISTS
Send Greetings
to
HAROLD S. SMITH
TREASURER of the College

In recognition of the many years of labor for and devotion to the College and in appreciation of exemplary leadership which has advanced the profession and the College in public esteem."

A LETTER TO AMERICAN DENTISTS

Dental Schools Association of Japan
1-Chome Kanda-Misakicho, Chiyodaku,
Tokyo

Tokyo, Jan. 17th, 1950

Dr. John E. Gurley, Editor
American College of Dentists
San Francisco, California

Dear Sir:

The Dental Schools Association of Japan was established in July, 1948, on Col. Dale B. Ridgley's advice. All the dental schools in Japan now join in it. There are eight dental schools in Japan, of which six are colleges of the University standard; the other two are Semmon-gakko type schools. Until the termination of war, we had no educational institutions where such high-level dental education as now given in the colleges was conducted. But under the guidance of Col. Ridgley, the chief of Dental Affairs Division of P.H.W.¹, G.H.Q.¹, six of the dental schools were raised to the University status and the first class of students in each of the colleges was opened in April last. It is decided that dental education shall be conducted in colleges of the University standard. The term of education is eighteen years in total, distributed as follows: 6 years in the primary school, 3 years in the middle school, 3 years in the high school, 2 years in the liberal arts college, and 4 years in the dental college. A national examination will be held for the graduates, dentist's licences are given to those who have passed it. The first graduates will be turned out from the University standard colleges, in March 1953.

The aims of this association are, to promote the friendly relation of the dental schools with each other, improvement and elevation of dental education, and the study of the teaching method. An Executive Committee has been organized, members of which are representatives sent from each school (two committeemen per school, one of whom is the dean, the other, a professor).

There are no schools which were not damaged at all by war. A certain dental school was completely burnt down to ashes by war-fire. After the termination of war, all of them have been trying to improve educational facilities and complete all arrangements for these 4 years and a half. At this moment, what is most desired is literature published in your country; books, magazines, and treatises, edited after the opening of war. But it is very hard for us to get them. Only the borrowing of them, or the visiting of the public library of C.I.E., is allowed to us. We are very obliged to you if you send magazines or books to the above address. This association shall send them to each school or consult the convenience of circulating them. It is also eagerly desired that a copy of the announcements of dental colleges be sent to each school. Treatises are most desired, irrespective of subjects. We are sure that we will make great progress, guided and stimulated by the advancement of dental science in your country.

The names and pictures of present Japanese dental schools are as shown herewith:

Review Prepared By

F. W. CRADDOCK, B.A., Dip.Ed., Cert.Dent.(N.Z.), M.S.D.(Northwestern)

Senior Lecturer in Prosthetic Dentistry

The University of Otago Dental School may claim the distinction of being one of the first in the British Commonwealth to be directly affiliated with a University. Indeed, it acquired full status as a Faculty from its inception in 1907. The wisdom of this early decision has been confirmed by results and by the marked tendency in recent years for schools which were originally independent or dominated by other bodies to seek university affiliation. Of equal significance for the trend of dental education in this country is the fact that the school was located not in the capital city or in the largest centre of population but in Dunedin where the Medical School had been established some thirty years earlier and where an appreciation of the value of higher education, often characteristic of smaller communities, had already taken root. With such a background it is not surprising that our development has proceeded in the direction of establishing sound academic standards and close liaison with Medicine and with those cultural, scientific, and research activities normally associated with a University. This has been achieved without sacrifice of that high measure of autonomy in the absence of which dental education invariably languishes.

Since New Zealand was a British Dominion and the first Dean and Director was himself an Englishman, it was natural that the curriculum originally established should follow closely the British pattern; and we have no regrets that the undoubted strength of the British tradition in general science and in the "core" subjects of Anatomy, Physiology, Medicine, Surgery, and Pathology was in this way implanted at the outset. On this basis we have built what might be called the more purely dental disciplines and skills by which mere knowledge is translated into effective practice. Here, we have borrowed most heavily and very profitably from America. In formulating an educational policy and devising a well-balanced curriculum, it is possible that geographical isolation, our youth, and the lack of any famous professional figures either dead or living to dominate the scene, may not have been entirely disadvantageous. At least we have been conscious of a welcome freedom to evaluate and apply or reject dispassionately the wide range of educational philosophies and professional techniques exhibited by other schools and countries. Thus it is that, to the outside observer, dental education in New Zealand would probably appear as a blend of what we believe are the best features of both the British and American traditions. The American ideal of equipping a graduate for commencing practice at an astonishingly high level of technical skill is tempered somewhat by greater emphasis on basic medical sciences, though not to the extent that prevails in Great Britain and in Europe generally. We are acutely aware of the perennial problem in dental education, namely, that knowledge in this field cannot be applied to benefit the patient without technical skill; and that, on the other hand, misapplied or unenlightened technical skill may be disastrous. As a further complication, a sound pattern of dental education cannot be built up without consideration of the dental needs of the community in which graduates will practice. In India, for example, treatment of periodontal conditions is most urgent; New Zealand on the other hand, in consonance with its high standard of living and sugar consumption, enjoys the doubtful distinction of having perhaps the highest incidence of dental caries in the world. This has obliged us to give Conservative Dentistry and more recently Preventive and Public Health Dentistry a prominent position in the curriculum.

The Course for the degree of Bachelor of Dental Surgery occupies five years, which probably represents the practical and economic upper limit of the time at our disposal for training. Effective employment of this time demands constant scrutiny and re-evaluation of the course of studies so that it will at all times be in keeping with the changing emphases and expanding frontiers of dental practice. The outline of the course in the current issue of the Otago University Calendar differs quite considerably from that of only two or three years ago; three years hence it may require further modification. This is not the place for setting out details of our dental course, especially as any readers who are interested can refer to them in the above publication. It may be of general interest, however, to list briefly the subjects of the course and the approximate hours devoted to them. These are as follows:

Physics	264	Organic & Inorganic Chemistry	363
Zoology & Botany	308	Anatomy & Histology	308
Physiology & Biochemistry	165	Dental Materials	77
Dental Mechanics	561	History, Ethics, & Technical Composition	11
Prosthetic Dentistry	880	General Pathology & Bacteriology	143
Dental Pathology & Bacteriology	88	Dental Anatomy & Histology	132
Orthodontics	291	General Surgery & Hospital Attendance	88
General Medicine	66	General Pharmacology & Therapeutics	22
Dental Pharmacology & Therapeutics	22	General Anaesthesia	30
Dental and Oral Surgery & Radiography	200	Periodontia	165
Conservative Dentistry, Crown and Bridgework, and Ceramics	1070	Preventive, Public Health, & Childrens Dentistry	121
Dental Jurisprudence	11

Total hours 5386, equal to 1077 per academic year.

In addition to the degree of Bachelor of Dental Surgery, which entitles the holder to practice in New Zealand or other British Commonwealth countries, the University offers the degrees of Master of Dental Surgery and Doctor of Dental Surgery after one and four additional years of study and practice. In future it is hoped to make greater provision for graduate and post-graduate instruction and encourage practitioners to return for that further study and instruction which the expanding content of dentistry has made it impossible to provide in the normal undergraduate course. Since we cannot hope to send out students skilled in everything, the policy of the Faculty is, firstly, to provide a sound basic training; secondly, to give adequate opportunity for clinical experience in the commoner types of dental treatment; thirdly, to show by demonstration the more difficult or unusual cases of diagnosis and treatment; and finally, to graduate the student with a capacity to think and scientific habits of mind, with an awareness of his own ignorance and of the wide ramifications of dentistry as a health service, and with a desire to keep his basic training fresh and to build steadily on it.

Although the present building was designed to accommodate only 80 to 100 students, our enrollment is now approximately 200. The full-time teaching staff consists of the Dean who is Professor of Dentistry, assisted by six Senior Lecturers who are heads of the main departments, and four Lecturers. Non-teaching staff consists of two Hospital Dental Surgeons, two scientific research officers, and the usual auxiliary personnel such as laboratory and technical workers, clerical and nursing staff. The nursing staff is in charge of a qualified nursing sister. The work of the full-time teaching staff is supplemented by visits from six or more dentists in private practice in the city who attend one morning per week. Their services have been found of greatest value in the Conservative Department. With the exception of the purely Medical subjects, which are taught in the Medical School formal lectures and class demonstrations are entirely in the hands of the full-time staff. It will be seen that our dependence on an Honorary Visiting or part-time staff is rather less than in either Europe or America. The duties of each member of the teaching staff are so arranged that he has approximately three half-days per week available for the preparation of teaching material, for study, and for research. This provision has been of great assistance in recruiting and retaining a well-qualified staff with teaching and academic interests, and maintaining in the Faculty a progressive and stimulating atmosphere. It has encouraged, also, a steady flow of publications in periodical dental literature. In addition to what may be described as staff or departmental research, or work done by candidates for higher degrees, the School provides facilities for a full-time research officer and assistants engaged on projects supported by public funds through the Medical Research Council, of whose Dental Committee the Dean of the Dental Faculty is Chairman. Funds for research have been provided in recent years on a generous scale by Government, University, and private grants. The School operates in close cooperation with the Medical School, with other faculties of the University, and with the New Zealand Dental Association, a member of this body having a seat on the Faculty. The general revenues of the School consisting of patients' and students' fees are supplemented by State, University, and local Hospital grants.

New Zealanders as a whole are conscious of their geographical isolation and make strenuous efforts by reading and travel to overcome this disability and even turn it to advantage. Practically every member of the staff has had overseas experience in some form and several have overseas dental qualifications. Since the conclusion of hostilities, and with the improvement of travel facilities, the University has encouraged and made financial provision for overseas experience for all faculties. Although, I understand, New Zealanders have just recently fallen from grace, they were for many years the world's most avid readers and are still near the top of the list. The Dental School Library consists of 1187 volumes of up-to-date text and reference books, and is rapidly being enlarged. Books of historical interest are not included in this figure. Over 100 journals are received currently, including those belonging to the Dental Association received in exchange for the New Zealand Dental Journal. Sixteen journals are in languages other than English. The Index to dental periodical literature from 1893 is complete to the last volume issued, and is further supplemented by the cards issued by the Index Bureau of the American Dental Association. The library is under the control of a full-time librarian, and qualified help is extended to students and staff of the School and to members of the New Zealand Dental Association. Every endeavour is made to encourage students to use the facilities of the library and advice is given as to how to employ these to the greatest advantage.

To meet present and future needs, plans have already been drawn and approved for a completely new building on a site adjacent to the present School. The structure will have four floors and a total area of 75,000 square feet. The building will be of reinforced concrete design and of modern external architectural treatment. It will be planned to graduate fifty students each year.

A knowledge that transcends time and place is of 'absolute value' and involves both truth and justice. It is found by studying the minds of men of the past, and by reflecting upon what they had to say.

The differences in human life depend, for the most part, not on what men do, but upon the meaning and purpose of their acts. All are born, all die, all lose their loved ones, nearly all marry and nearly all work, but the significance of these acts may vary enormously. The same physical act may be in one situation vulgar and in another holy. The same work may be elevating or degrading. The major question is not, "What act do I perform?" but "In what frame do I put it?" Wisdom about life consists in taking the inevitable ventures which are the very stuff of common existence, and glorifying them.

If you have or want a philosophy of life, do three things:

1. Keep a sense of wonder
2. Aim for a definite goal
3. Hold your philosophy with conviction, yet with tentativeness

Thus philosophy cannot be static but it becomes truly dynamic.
